Our City Comment & discussion by THOMAS D. WATSON

L. A. Traffic Is Terror to New York Expert in Safety First

FREDERICK H. Elliott of New York, who founded the "Safety First" movement, after taking a ride through Los Angeles traffic, informed reporters that the ride gave him the thrill of his life.

In a statement made yesterday, he said that he had never seen such loose handling of traffic and he had studied traffic conditions in most cities of the country.

This statement bears out our experience as given in our editorial of June 27, in which we said that if present conditions were allowed to continue Los Angeles would soon be known as the "Forbidden City."

* * *

IF A TRAFFIC expert from the city of New York, where the traffic is considerably heavier makes such a statement, conditions in Los Angeles much be chaotic.

We have had this opinion for some time and have made it a point never to go to Los Angeles unless compelled to do so and then have always felt considerable relief on starting for home.

* * *

THE Glendale city council is again being asked to consider an application for the establishment of a local bus line.

In the application the applicant advises that he will operate two cars within 60 days, adding more as the conditions justify. In most particulars the wording of the application is similar to the one made some time ago and which the city council granted. It tied the city's hands for 90 days and then petered out.

We would suggest that this time some precautions be used before giving consideration to any application for a bus permit.

* * *

THE applicant should show proper financial responsibility to guarantee his ability to furnish adequate facilities and he should also be required to furnish a bond subject to forfeiture should the buses not be operating in 60 days.

We understand when the last permit was granted one of the Glendale councilmen made a statement that he would vote to grant the permit even if the applicant did not have a cent.

This was a wrong stand to take if the interests of the people are to be safeguarded. No individual should be given such an important permit unless he has given assurance that he has ample resources to assure success.

Paris Celebrates the Fourth of July; Herrick in Address

By JOHN O'BRIEN
United Press Staff Correspondent

PARIS, July 4.—Franco-American friendship, born a century ago, renewed in the world war and continued since then, despite annoying divergences of opinion, regarding world problems, was toasted today in the wines of France in half a dozen official and semi-official celebrations of the Fourth.

It received official consecration in the inauguration in the Place des Etats-Unis (United States Square) of the monument erected by French subscriptions to the memory of the gallant American volunteers who faced death on the battlefields of France before the United States entered the world war.

Forty or fifty thousand visitors from over the ocean, here to enjoy what they still call "Gay Paree," might have believed themselves in any old Main street of America today, except for the fact that they could sit on the terrace of a cafe on the said Main street and drink real liquor while at the same time watching the starry banner float from government buildings, hotels and private homes.

National holidays of other countries come and go in Paris like French feast days, without exciting more than passing interest, but America's "Fourth" always awakens a responsive chord in the French heart.

Ambassador Herrick delivered an address at the unveiling of the statue to the American volunteers. The bronze figure surmounting the memorial, which is the work of the sculptor, Jean Boucher, and was shown in the recent Salon, represents an American soldier calling to his compatriots to come over the seas and join him. The sculptor modeled the face from photographs of Alan Seeger, the young poet-soldier of the foreign legion, who gave his life "at midnight in a flaming town," on July 4, 1916, at Belleau-en-Santerre. The committee in charge of the collection of subscriptions included President Millerand, Premier Poincare, Marshals Joffre, Foch and Petain and dozens of other political and military notables.

PROTEGE OF MUSIC CLUB WRITES HOME

Hazel Linkogel Says Contestants Were All Sidetracked

AUER PICKS PUPIL

Awards Scholarship Without Regard for Terms of Contest

A gossipy letter written by Hazel Linkogel to Mrs. Mattison B. Jones, as president of the Glendale Music club, which made her the boneficiary of a scholarship, was read by Mrs. Jones at the annual banquet of the club Friday evening and was heard with the greatest interest by the many friends of Miss Linkogel. It revealed how the arbitrary action of Auer, the great violin teacher, robbed her and the other four victors in the preliminary contest for a summer scholarship, of their opportunity in a final contest by giving the scholarship arbitrarily to a pupil who had been under the instruction of the master for five years and who was brought by him from New York, in spite of the previous ruling that only pupils who had been in the preliminary could compete. The letter reads as follows:

My dear Mrs. Jones: The evening I left Glendale I tried several times to reach you by phone, but my efforts were in vain. I have been quite busy, as well as excited, since arriving here and so this is my first chance to write you. However, I do appreciate your kindness and your help and wonderful interest in my future. Your tireless efforts to make the recital the success that it was.

I cannot begin to tell you how very appreciatiye I really am of all Glendale's interest in my work. I just felt so proud to know that all through the contest Glendale was pulling for me and will be pulling for me all through my studies. I'll tell you, it is a wonderful feeling.

My experiences on the way were numerous and interesting. I met many people who were extremely interesting. One lady, a Russian, never ceased talking of her son, who is at present studying with Professor Auer. Of course she knew there was none just as wonderful as her son, but all mothers think that. Then there was a dear little girl who was studying violin, but she said she didn't like practice. This, of course, was nothing new to my ears. I have heard that many times before.

But the most interesting experience of all and one I think was quite out of the ordinary was the fact that I wasted very little precious time on my way. The Pullman conductor, a lovely young fellow (perhaps that accounts for it) allowed me the privilege of occupying the drawing room all day and every day, and so I practiced a great deal of the way. Wasn't that quite kind of the conductor?

I don't think I ever saw quite so much water where it shouldn't be. The floods were terrible. The fences and shrubbery were all covered over. It almost made one seasick, only there were no waves.

When I arrived here I was taken to the Musical College, where I registered and got the business all attended to. Then my sister, whom I met in Kansas City, and I started out in search of shelter and food. We arrived at the Esther Home for Girls and remained there for a week. My sister left a few days later for Glendale, where she is at the present time, and I moved to the Y. W. C. A., which is but one and one-half blocks from the college. I like it here very much and was fortunate enough to get on the seventh floor, as that is the only floor musicians are allowed. And such a noise you never heard. Surely, it creates an atmosphere, if nothing more. I like it very, very much, and my roommate is a dear little girl who is an exceedingly fine pianiste.

Last Sunday was the preliminary examination for Auer scholarship, and I was one of the five chosen to compete in the finals. There were fifty applicants, but they didn't all compete. Perhaps they became frightened at the last moment.

Today was the final. They announced that anyone not having been in the preliminary could not take part in the final. But Mr., or rather I should say, Professor Auer arrived from New York a couple of days ago and brought with him a few pupils who competed in the finals, and of course one of them won the scholarship. She has been taking lessons from him for five years and makes her debut in Carnegie hall, New York, next winter. Of course, it does not seem just fair and everyone concerned was very angry, but what can we do? Well, I feel quite fortunate, nevertheless, in having won a partial scholarship with him.

I had a long talk with Professor Auer today and he is perfectly wonderful. He really seems human. He wants me to come to New York this winter and study. He says he could do a great deal for me there, but can do nothing here. Of course, the college has the whole say here. He likes my work very much and told the other judges that I had an over-abundance of talent and in a couple of years should make an exceedingly fine player. And, of course, that made me feel quite comforted. He even took the time to assign my first lesson, which is Monday. So I guess the old world is not quite so cruel as it might be. But I surely hope it won't get any crueler.

Chicago is very hot and dirty. It is and has been very hot and it keeps me busy washing my face and hands. The smoke is so thick. But my room is on the lake and so the breeze is the best to be had.

Again I wish to say that I am more than appreciative of all Glendale's wonderful interest, and please remember me to dear Mrs. Gibson, who was so wonderful to me during my two busy years at G. U. H. S. Also please deliver my kindest regards to the Music clubs, both junior and senior, and the Tuesday Afternoon club, P. E. O., and all the others whose kindness and interest are so deeply appreciated by

Yours most sincerely,
HAZEL M. LINKOGEL.

C. E. Hutchinson, of 246 North Orange street, and Mr. Canady of Long Beach, are planning to leave by automobile Thursday morning for the mountains above Fresno. They will join the Sierra club at Yosemite national park and will spend about two months in the mountains.

RECREATION OPENS WITH BIG CROWD

Over 135 Children and Young Folks Visit Recreational Areas

SPORT PROGRAMS ON

Directors Have Busy Time on All School Grounds

Over 135 children and young people visited the high school, Central avenue and Cerritos avenue playgrounds on Monday, the opening day of the summer playgrounds. Tennis, baseball and other tournaments will be arranged by the various directors in charge of the grounds.

Mrs. Robert Kolts will be on the high school grounds for the first part of the summer and will look after the young women, girls and smaller children. A large number of entries for tennis and other sports have already been received by her. She has called a meeting of all the girls, to be held on Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the tennis court, when plans will be outlined. On Monday there will be a gala opening of the grounds for the girls and smaller children. This will be followed by a visit to the swimming pool at Patterson Avenue park. Entries are now being received for a tennis tournament to be played during the summer. There will be a trophy given for both boys and girls.

Beginning on Tuesday, July 10, Mrs. Kolts will have a story hour at 2:30 o'clock on the high school lawn, for the small children.

Normal Hayhurst is to be in charge of the men's athletic field on the high school grounds from 1 p. m. until 9 o'clock. He is taking entries for the men's and boys' tennis tournament and baseball games. According to R. E. Tucker, local Community Service executive, the city council is arranging to install lights on the tennis court and also additional lighting on the athletic field.

Edward Bremer, who is to have charge of the Cerritos Avenue playground, and James McMasters, in charge of the Central Avenue playground, are arranging to have interplayground baseball contests for both boys and girls. They will also lay out a five-hole golf course on each playground. Soft sponge balls will be used instead of the regulation golf ball. The young people may bring any kind of club they wish. It is said that actual practice in the elements of the game will be given and probably contests will be arranged later.

At a meeting of the playground directors and R. E. Tucker, held Monday afternoon, it was decided that the playgrounds will be closed on July 4th.

BIG FIELD FOR 250 MILE RACE AT KANSAS CITY

Fourteen of World's Fastest Cars Line Up for the Start

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 4 (United Press)—Fourteen of the world's fastest speed cars, piloted by championship drivers, lined the board speedway here today for the annual 250-mile championship auto race.

The board oval was pronounced in record shape after several trial circuits by veteran drivers. The track was smoothed out and made lightning fast, as well as safe for record racing, following several preliminary tests.

Tommy Milton, with his H. C. S. special, which he drove to victory at the Indianapolis speedway Memorial day, skirted the oval yesterday averaging well below 40 seconds each round. He predicts he will make better speed today than he did on the brick circuit at Indianapolis.

Jimmy Murphy, in his Durant special, after speeding around the board oval in his last trial circuit, pronounced the track in better condition than a year ago, and predicted a faster time would be made by the winner than was set at Indianapolis.

Earl Cooper, with a Durant special, and Leon Duray, driving a Duray special, were on the scene early, warming up for the big classic.

Other entries include four more Durant specials, to be driven by Harry Hartz, Eddie Hearne, Jerry Wonderlich and Harlan Fengler. Bennett Hill, "Howdy" Wilcox and Dave Lewis will man the three Dusenberg entries. Ralph De Palma will drive a Wade Special, local entry. Frank Elliott was entered with his Elliott special.

Speedway oficials estimated that at least 50,000 spectators would be in the grandstands at the start-off this afternoon.

Purses for the winners will total $25,000.

HE-MEN GO WILD AT POWDER PUFF

MARSHFIELD, Oregon, July 4. (United Press).—A hegira of all the he-men of San Francisco threatens. Back to the rough east, to where a man's something of a male anyhow.

It's all due to the latest at the chain drug store counters. Powder puffs and dainty vanity bags for men—just the thing to fit in your vest pocket. When the nose gets shiny—give it a swab with the powder puff. The Powell—or has been insinuated—Prowell street sheiks, are said to be "dead in love with the latest toilet article," and declaim a youth has as much right to keep his nose white and nonshiny as a girl.

Boy, page the back-to-nature faddists!

INDIVIDUAL IS THE BIGGEST THING

OAKLAND, Calif., July 4—The biggest thing in education is the development of the individual, and the most important phase of this development is the proper placing of the individual, Miss Margaret H. Smith, principal of the Sixty-First street school, Los Angeles, Calif., told the department of elementary school principals at the National Education Association convention here today.

Freedom and Its Enemies

By SAMUEL GOMPERS

Approach of the National Independence Day brings into clearer delineation the modern struggle for freedom and independence; a struggle just as vital as ever man's conquest of restrictions and restraint has been.

We need freedom today in a large sense. We need freedom today for the exercise of the normal, rational and necessary functions of our industrial society.

We are beset by many forces that seek either the destruction of freedom or the retarding of its development.

We have on the one hand fanatics and zealots who would impose the restraints of bigotry upon all people. We have, on the other hand, industrial and political forces that are totally blind to the course of natural evolution and who seek to shape our growing, changing industrial order to their own desires, either in order to reap the fruits of greed or to gratify their ambition for place and power.

We need above all today to be freed from the machinations and blunders of legislators who have done and are doing their best to impose coercive, restrictive laws upon an industrial organization and an industrial life that must in the nature of things make progress by the evolution within itself of principles, methods and policies.

Labor and management alike chafe under the misdirected crusading of politicians. The dour-faced moralist who seeks to impose his narrow code upon all humanity is no more a menace to fullness and freedom of life than the legislative experimenter who seeks to write his uncomprehending "thou shalt not" across the whole industrial horizon.

I bespeak no license for pillage and plunder; far from that. But I do bespeak freedom for the normal, rational constructive functioning of the legitimate forces of industry—freedom for these from the restrictions so ardently sought by special interests and by bigots.

There is a type of mind, strangely twisted, that seeks to order the conduct of others. "No one shall do that which I do not want them to do," is its cardinal principle.

Give us, in our time, freedom from bigotry, freedom from ignorance, freedom from greed. Our law books are disgraced by a thousand laws forbidding this and that, seeking in every conceivable direction to interfere with the normal, rational conduct of men and organizations and to thwart the course of evolutionary development.

The most powerful and most consistent spokesman for the freedom of which I speak is the much misunderstood, much abused trade-union movement. It stands always on the frontier of the march of progress, making the fight for humanity and human rights, for progress in all the avenues of life, for emancipation from the blindness of the past. Our eyes are on the heights, but we make no blind rush to the ascent. We seek to proceed through reason, in accord with the institutions and methods of our time.

We are on the eve of another anniversary of Independence Day. Let us resolve to be free to think and do as the time demand, in the cause of human freedom.

WORLD WAR VETERANS TO VISIT

Tuesday Afternoon Club to Be Host to Disabled Men

S. O. S. FOR ALL CARS

Miscellaneous Musical Program Has Been Arranged for July 13

On July 13, 150 World War veterans of Glendale are to be guests of the Tuesday Afternoon Club of Glendale from 1 p. m. until 5 o'clock. A miscellaneous program of music and other numbers will be given and is being arranged by the committee, which includes Mrs. E. W. W. Hayward, chairman, Mrs. C. W. Houston, Mrs. Wm. Hunter, Mrs. Lillian Dow and Mrs. A. P. Findlay.

It is hoped that members of the club will volunteer the use of at least thirty-six automobiles to transport the veterans to and from Sawtelle. The officials in charge of the home are more than delighted at the invitation of the Tuesday Afternoon Club, not only at the prospect of the boys visiting the clubhouse, but also because of the opportunity they will have of enjoying the ride to Glendale. Special dispensation is being made by the officials in allowing the World War veterans to come over.

After the program refreshments will be served. A small admission charge of 25 cents will be made for club members. Those not able to attend are asked to make this small donation to help in defraying the expenses of the afternoon.

DES MOINES IS READY FOR BIG C. E. MEETING

Twenty-five Thousand to Attend Convention Opening Day

DES MOINES, Iowa., July 4.—Des Moines has completed preparations for the entertainment of more than 25,000 visitors during the 29th International Christian Endeavor convention, to be held here July 1 to 9. The convention, it is said, will be one of the largest religious gatherings of the year. The delegations alone will number nearly 15,000.

William J. Bryan, William G. McAdoo, James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor; Sherwood Eddy, Gipsy Smith, Dr. Francis E. Clark and Sir Lionel Fletcher are among the widely known speakers slated to address various sessions. Mr. Bryan's address is to be given at the state fair grounds, Sunday, July 8.

A great parade of delegates on Saturday evening, July 7, will be the spectacle of the convention. Accompanied by bands and guards, state delegations will march in costume and representatives of foreign countries in native dress.

Fifteen platforms will be erected in downtown streets to accommodate huge street meetings which are to be features of the convention program.

A Temple of Fine Arts, temporarily erected in a downtown church by Professor H. Augustine Smith of Boston University, will have on display during the convention session 500 famous old prints.

Professor Smith will inaugurate at the convention a crusade against slang and jazz.

"Some church music is worse than jazz," Professor Smith said here today. "The child who sings 'I want to be an angel' needs a doctor."

RURAL SCHOOLS ARE SALVATION

OAKLAND, Calif., July 4—Teach in the rural school in order to put in practice new education theories, because in the rural and village communities is the hope of salvation for teachers and for education Miss Grace G. Stanley, state commissioner of elementary education Sacramento, Calif., told the department of elementary education delegates at the National Education association convention here today. She said: "The curse of education today is its dependence on formal tasks through the medium of strict organization. In the large cities where organization has its most deadly grip, by virtue of the large masses involved, you and your personality are in danger of being lost. Wonderful opportunities in rural teaching wait you who have initiative and originality. A few years of work in such schools will bring the whole world to your doors to learn of you."

MUSIC TEACHERS HOLD ROUND TABLE DISCUSSION

First Gathering of Instructors Held at the Marlenee Residence

Teachers who are members of the Glendale Music club, proved their interest in the new section of the organization which is to be called the "Music Teachers' Round Table," by attending the first meeting last night at the home of Mrs. C. L. Marlenee, 301 South Central avenue. The aim of the section is to assist the members of the junior and juvenile auxiliaries of the club and for the general discussion of matters of general interest musically and the problems that come up in the work of the various teachers.

Mrs. Mattison B. Jones, president of the Glendale Music club, was present and gave a short talk telling of the purpose of the section of which Mrs. Eva Cunningham is to be chairman. Others present last night included Mrs. Katherine Shank, Harry Girard, Mrs. L. N. Hagood, Mrs. Eugene Murman, Miss Helene Morgan, Mrs. Calvin Whiting, Mrs. Grace Jackson, Miss Lilla Litch, Miss Campbell, Mrs. Eva Cunningham, Mrs. L. G. Sherman, Mrs. Alma Gibbs, Dr. and Mrs. Charles L. Marlenee. Several other members of the club who were unable to be present last night sent in their names, stating that they wished to become members of the section. These include Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Cavanah, Julius Kranz, Miss Gertrude Cleophas, Mrs. Gertrude Champlain Erb and others.

The next meeting will be on July 25 at the summer home of Mrs. Jones at Hermosa Beach.

SPANISH WAR VETS ARE HERE

From All Parts of the County They Gather for Picnic

From all parts of the county Spanish-American war veterans came to Glendale this morning. The Pasadena Ensign Bagley camp came with flying colors, followed in a short time by veterans from Santa Monica and Sawtelle.

All headed for Verdugo Park, where the families from near-by cities had already begun to gather. Eleven camps throughout Los Angeles county were represented at the different groups where all veterans were asked to register.

The gay laughter of children, the waving of the Stars and Stripes, and suggestions of the national colors in decorations on the machines and tables gave evidence that a celebration of the Fourth of July was in progress.

Although the horseshoe contest had started, the results were not available at the time of publication, but a full list of the prize winners will be given in tomorrow's Daily Press.

Preparations for the afternoon's fun were in progress while the savory odor of simmering coffee and baked beans, with now and then the sizzle and sputter of a "hot dog" as it turned a delicious, tempting looking brown. Everyone testified to being prematurely hungry, and clamored for an early ringing of the dinner bell.

The baseball game is scheduled to take place this afternoon between the Ensign Bagley nine from Pasadena and a picked team from the local veteran camp.

From early evening to midnight, dancing will take place at the pavillion. Music will be furnished by an orchestra composed of veterans from the Glendale camp.

COOS BAY WORK IS AT LAST STARTING

When finished, the labor will assure southwestern Oregon a port of unusual excellence, and dockage facilities sufficient to handle the great lumber output and other products shipped from this section of the northwest.

A tug, a number of barges and several carloads of machinery are here to be used in the work, which will keep a large crew of men busy steadily for the next three years.

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Schult of Los Angeles are guests today of Mrs. Schult's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Card, of 370 West Patterson avenue.

One of the most popular activities, as indicated by the cards which have been returned to the social recreation committee by the young people, will be swimming, for which over 100 have already signed up. Cyrus Smith is to be chairman of the swimming committee. The first big swimming party will be held on Thursday, July 12, when they will have exclusive use of the pool at Patterson Park from 7 p. m. until 9 o'clock. Free instruction in swimming will be given from 7 o'clock until 8. From 8 o'clock until 9 there will be games, such as water volley ball, water polo and water baseball. After the swimming there will be a big bonfire at 9 o'clock, with a weiner roast and coffee. The organization of the swimming unit of Glendale Community Service will then take place, and committees will be appointed to work with Mr. Smith, chairman.

The first meeting of those interested in tennis will be held on July 10 at the Tuesday Afternoon club. It is planned to have free instruction given in tennis at the high school courts.

Horseback riding will be one of the popular sports. Over fifty have signed up already. The social recreation committee is busy at work securing information from the various riding academies and a special meeting will be called in the near future for this particular activity.

These are just a few of the activities suggested and plans for others will be worked out.

The party left Glendale early this morning by automobile for a ranch in the mountains near Brent's Crags. After a picnic lunch they have planned a baseball game, races and other sports. This will be followed by supper and then a wonderful display of fireworks, after which the party will return to Glendale.

"Your husband has been ill?" asked the clergyman, who was paying his monthly call.

"Yes," replied the worried looking woman. "He has been feeling very badly. I do my best to please him, but nothing seems to satisfy him."

"Is his condition critical?"

"It's worse than critical," she answered with a sigh, "it's abusive."

GLENDALE'S SIGN KNOWS WHEN TO GO TO WORK

Fishers Were Just Talking About It When It Opened Up

It was "Three O'clock in the Morning," only the two occupants of the machine didn't have any of the soulful enjoyment usually attributed to those who lend their vocal attainments to this selection.

Instead, they were figuratively groping around for an electric light button, in order to find their way home in the fog, for the two occupants of the machine were H. H. Fisher and D. D. Fisher, one of Los Angeles, and the other a resident of Glendale, who, being night workers, were returning to the home of the latter, 127 1-2 South Adams street.

One had just said that he did not know what would happen if they didn't come out of it (meaning the fog) pretty soon, when of a sudden, as if by magic, there was no more fog. A luminous electric sign shone overhead, and blazoned the words "Glendale city limits," before them. Of course, it might not happen again in a thousand years, but it did happen this once, and the Fisher brothers' mother, Mrs. C. S. Fisher, who is a resident of Glendale, couldn't resist the temptation to let the rest of the Glendalians know that it is sometimes truthful to say that there is no fog here.

Work Urged as Means to Save Dying Hawaiian Race

[By Associated Press]

HONOLULU, July 3.—The Hawaiians have a right to the good things of their islands and "I hope you will not let possession of them slip from your hands," Rrepresentative John E. Raker of California told the Hawaiian Civic club here recently.

"After two weeks of studying your territory I am wondering what is to become of the Hawaiians," he continued. "A short time ago, near the immigration station, I saw 250 men and women from the Philippines, and I am wondering whether they are to take your places here, for I don't see Hawaiians using and owning the soil.

"If you Hawaiians could develop Molokai it would renew your energy, aspiration and give new hope to your young men," he said. "You have the right to some things which were the heritage of your fathers. We Americans, and you Hawaiians are Americans, are getting farther away from work and labor. Yet, unless education leads youth back to the land, it is vain."

Warns Airedale Owners Against Using Clippers

NEW ORLEANS, July 4—Vehement exposulations aginst the turning of Airdales into Irish terriers by New Orleans citizens come from Dr. W. J. Ratigan, veterinarian at the municipal zoo. The burden of the veterinarian's complaint is that mistakenly compassionate owners of Airedales are having their dogs clipped, with the erroneous idea that such treatment will cause less suffering from heat during the summer months.

It isn't so, says Dr. Ratigan, for the Airedale differs from other dogs in that it has two coats of hair instead of one. The outside coat is of wiry texture while the inner one is soft and downy. Steel clippers, perceiving no distinction, shear away the soft lower coat as well as the upper one and according to the veterinarian, rob the Airdale of its position as a rare specimen and transform it into an oversized Irish terrier, for when the lower coat is clipped the distinguishing black saddle of the breed grows back as a pale yellow or white.

Dr. Ratigan warns Airedale owners that their dogs should be plucked like a goose instead of clipped. The plucking removes the outer wiry hair and preserves the inner coat of distinguishing down. The veterinarian neglected to say how many muzzles would be required to hold an Airedale's jaws during the plucking process.

A very simple process will restore ivory carvings that have become discolored. Paint them with spirits of turpentine and expose them to the sunshine for a few days. This treatment will also prove beneficial to ivory piano keys when they begin to turn yellow.

Vital Theme in Modern Life Is Presented Today

One of the most vital themes of modern day life has been presented in a way that promises to establish new standards for the emotional drama in "What A Wife Learned," the most recent Thomas H. Ince production now running at the T. D. and L. theatre.

Against a background of tense dramatic action, the story of modern day wife and a more primitiive husband has been wrought out. Intensely feminine but equally ambitious is Sheila Russell, the woman of the story whose pursuit of a career arouses the jealousy of her husband and brings about misunderstandings that bring about temporary estrangement.

Jim Russell is a splendid type of the 'he-man,' a virile Westerner who wins Sheila by his forcefulness but later almost loses her because he fails to understand the driving power back of her work, the "sexless creative impulse," which is dormant in every human being.

Swift moving events tear husband and wife apart and seem to be working against any possible reconciliation until Jim in his great loneliness cries out that "even God and the elements are conspiring against him." There comes a moment when the storm clouds burst and the floods descend, threatening the foundations of the great work on which Jim has staked everything he owns in the effort to keep abreast of his ambitious wife.

Out of the dramatic crisis comes a solution of this conflict. It is a solution of measureless interest for countless homes where similar misunderstandings are occuring as a result of the complexities of modern life.

No matter what the personal conviction may be on the subject of woman and her career, or of man and his adjustments to the woman of modern days, this is a picture of tremendous appeal. Stirring events crowd upon each other until the emotions of the spectator are wrought up to concert pitch when a great dam bursts, trapping the two men of the story in raging flood waters.

"What a Wife Learned" is a tremendously vital presentation of a modern day romance. It is packed with human interest, with laughter, tears and tense emotion. Milton Sills, John Bowers and Marguerite de la Motte head a powerful cast.

Men who think themselves aggressive are usually classed as knockers by others.

Our Forefathers Fought for INDEPENDENCE

Just as the achievement of our national independence was of supreme importance in '76, so each of us is today confronted with the task of achieving "financial" independence.

George Washington's counsel was: "I cannot enjoin too strongly upon you a due observance of economy and frugality."

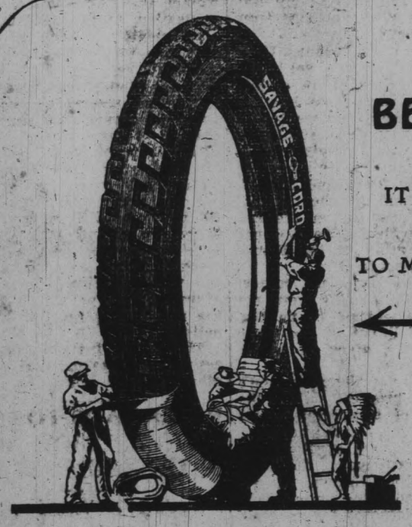
A SAVAGE TIRE "AD"—WITH COMMENTS — No. 7 OF A SERIES

The other day I went through a factory where perfectly familiar, every-day, ordinary things were being made. There was much more to the process than I had any idea of—and my trip proved mighty interesting. It has occurred to us that the same thing might apply to other people, as regards to the "manufacture" of advertisements. We will, therefore, escort you through the "mental processes" supporting a Savage Tire "ad". This will be done by making comments on the side—a rather unusual procedure in advertising you'll admit. If this little insight into an ordinarily hidden phase of advertising proves interesting to you, we will feel happy indeed, for we want you to read our ads—with interest. Royal B. Lee, Advertising Manager



DON'T BE DECEIVED—

IT TAKES MORE THAN "CORDS" TO MAKE A "QUALITY" TIRE

A heading that brings people up with a jolt and sets them to thinking can often be used to good advantage. Some types of advertising carry this to extremes but I think in this case we are giving a legitimate warning that can be productive of only good.

This illustration carries out the "constructional" idea we wish to convey. It implies that the building of a quality tire is no small matter and that the process needs a lot of attention. To emphasize this thought we have used "artists' license" and the tire is greatly exaggerated in size. Inasmuch as accuracy and detail are not involved, this procedure is quite permissible.

We got this thought from the ad of another tire company. It is true and worth repeating. If that company recognizes this statement, we don't mind admitting to them that we admire their advertising greatly. Usually they are very fair in their statements in their own behalf, and they usually leave room for other good tires on the market. Once in a while they claim to be The Best on Earth, like so many others do, but in the main they refrain from superlatives—a practice we have committed ourselves to and appreciate in others.

There was a time when cord tires were strictly quality tires. This was when the sole purpose of building tires of cord construction was to render increased mileage and better service.

It is really to be regretted that tires cannot be purchased by this same standard today. It is to be regretted that a tire of "cord construction" is no longer a guarantee of "quality construction".

The advent of cheap and unreliable tires of a construction that permits the name Cord to be applied, but does not embody with it the elements for increased service, has altered the original meaning of the word. Today the motoring public can only be guided by the integrity of the manufacturer in determining tire quality.

As a direct example of what we mean, it is a recognized fact that we are making fabric tires that outwear many cord tires on the market—and our two makes of cord tires are proportionately better than our fabric line. We attribute this to the fact that we are adhering strictly to quality standards.

The purpose of our advertising is, of course, to create a desire on your part to buy our particular brand of tires. To help you make this decision we name a number of worth while considerations which you are apt to want in the next tires you buy—and we remind you that these can be had by making your selection from our complete line. We make several types of tires, you know.

We feel it would be unwise to ask you to buy our product and then make you "hunt all over" to find one of our dealers—so we list them here. We think you'll find they are good people to do business with or we wouldn't be doing this advertising for them.

ICE COLD SUN

Something's the matter with the sun. It is getting colder than a prosecuting attorney's heart. Its temperature is so low the Smithsonian Institution, ice-cream manufacturers, and summer resort interests in general are very agitated.

* * *

The sun rises with a chill and sets with a pneumonia diagnosis. It is suffering from poor circulation, loss of vitality, lack of pep, and receding ambition. Unless it can be fitted out with a set of monkey glands it may prove a total loss.

* * *

It is now throwing off less heat than an apartment house furnace. And when anything gets that low it is about ready to throw off cracked ice.

* * *

The sun's rays this year are half of one per cent. They roll right off your parasol.

* * *

The outlook for a pleasant summer is getting worse and worse. A sunburn famine is predicted, and the prospects for a tan shortage are so great that invention already has been placed on the market through which a person may acquire a realistic tan in any quantity desired.

* * *

This marks the first attempt in world history to market a sun-substitute. With coal-substitutes in the winter and sun-substitutes in the summer, Ultimate Consumer seems in for a hard battle twelve months out of every twelve.

* * *

This sun-substittue is an electrical device. You sit beneath it and get a tan a la carte. Tans absolutely as represented or your money back.

* * *

Every sunburn is guaranteed for thirty days. There is talk of selling the devices in baby-grand sizes so a person may carry one about if the sun continues getting to jell. This will make it possible for bathing girls to sit on the beach and, in the matter of sunburns, roll their own.

* * *

Scientists say we may have the coldest summer since 1816, famous as the summer of Eighteen Hundred and Froze to Death. This is great news for coal dealers. They are very happy. All they ask now is a coal strike around the Fourth of July.

It looks bad for the summer resorts. A good many people with bungalows at the shore are talking of putting in steam heating plants, storm windows, and fur-lined curtains. Nobody knows whether to go in for canoeing or skiing.

* * *

Souvenir postals from the daughter on her July vacation will read:

"Dear Pa and Ma:

"Arrived at beacvh O. K. Think I will enjoy it as the hotel keeper just put in 10 more tons of coal. The place is crowded and everybody is enjoying Spanish influenza. I met a wonderful young man (an Arctic explorer) here and he has invited me to have pneumonia with him tomorrow evening at the Yacht club. I am chilled to the bone. Wish you were here.

CALIFORNIA IS 'LEGAL PIONEER

OAKLAND, Calif., July 4—California paved the way in enacting legislation in favor of the principle of equal pay for equal work for school teachers, Miss Julia E. Sulvan, Wendell Phillips Junior high school, Boston, Mass., told the department of classroom teachers at today's session of the National Education association convention here. She said: "As early as 1874, this principle was fought out in the California legislature, and an act was approved which abolished sex discrimination in the matter of salaries for teachers."

WHALE HUNT IS SCENE IN 'DOWN TO THE SEA'

Glendale Theater to Stage Last Showing of New Bedford Film

The great moment in "Down to the Sea in Ships," at the Glendale Theater today, comes when the whale, realizing the futility of escape, turns on his captors, sweeps one side of the boat, leaving but the stumps of broken oars in the hands of the fear-stricken crew. The harpoon is still embedded deeply in the back of the whale and in one last effort to rid itself of the life taking iron, the giant mammal of the deep swims off to a distance of several hundred feet, turns, hesitates an instant, then charges the boat with the speed and force of the fastest express. It is only a matter of seconds until the whale has hit the boat square in the middle, smashing it to bits and tossing its crew into the air. Sharks are plainly seen ready to strike the instant any of the crew touch the water.

Back of all this action, however, is one of the most appealing love stories revealed on the screen. Raymond McKee, in the part of a young engineer, returns to the scene of his childhood and finds Marguerite Courtot, his playmate of earlier days, grown to charming young womanhood. The decree of a stern father, owner of a whaling fleet, forbids his daughter's marriage to anyone but a whaleman who has sunk his harpoon into a whale. To answer this requirement, from which there was no appeal, McKee sets out to sign up as a whaleman, but before he has put his name to the articles, he is shanghaied and carried to sea against his will, under as cruel a mate as ever walked the deck.

A mutiny gives the green hand his chance and McKee, in the bow of a long boat, amid a school of whales plainly discernible on the screen, sinks his iron to the shank into his prey.

At this point, there begins one of the most hair-raising scenes ever recorded by a motion picture machine. Tearing at express speed straight for the broad Atlantic, the whale sets off in a dash for freedom. There have been many hairbreath escapes to add thrills to motion pictures, but in practically all of them there have been due precautions taken to guard against accidents, but in "Down to the Sea in Ships" McKee and his boatmen face a situation besides which the stunts of the average screen dare-devil fall into insignificance.

Utterly beyond the reach of the mother boat and 3,000 miles of deep water before them, their only course is to stick to the boat until the efforts of their capture cease. Subsequently, two other boats are able to attach lines to the leading whale-boat and for hours the whale tows a weight estimated at 6,000 pounds through the water at a speed almost inconceivable.

This entire action takes place before the eyes of the astounded audience. Every foot of it rings with the dangers of the sea and is permeated with the tang of salt air.

LABOR'S CHIEF LAUDS SCHOOLS

OAKLAND, Calif. July 4.—The discipline of the schoolroom today will show itself in the industry and commerce of tomorrow, and the teachers' character and personality will be reflected in the citizens of the republic generations hence, James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, Washington, D. C., told the department of classroom teachers at the N. E. A. annual convention here today.

Secretary Davis said:

"The classroom teacher as we know him or her today is one of the developments of civilization: as an institution such teaching has brought education within the reach of all. They tap the reservoirs of learning and feed the growing minds to meet the needs of an ever-advancing civilization.

"A great responsibility rests upon you as classroom teachers. Every child, although each is born as devoid of knowledge as another, has a different need, a different capacity, a different propensity. Their teaching is not only academic, but by example, for consciously or unconsciously, those entrusted to your teaching will learn something from every act and every word and every deed wherever done or spoken.

"But parents cannot today any more than yesterday place all the burden of tomorrow's civilization upon the classroom teacher. Many are overworked, and unfortunately or fortunately, teachers have the human tendency of getting tired, sometimes of becoming irritable. An overworked teacher cannot do her duty toward her pupils nor to herself. She takes prides in her service and feels the discouragement of less than 100 per cent delivery.

"I believe in encouragement, and in encouraging the classroom teacher gives encouragement to her wards. I believe the parent should become acquainted with the teacher, for she will then better understand the child. All the education given to a single child at home, at school, at Sunday school, at church, at college, and at the university must first of all mold a single life.

"No matter how many are indirectly affected, education has failed to serve its purpose if it does not mold that individual life into a well-shaped being and career. And so, it seems to me, that American fathers and mothers owe it to their posterity and to the teachers to work more closely together that our civilization may move steadily forward."

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

INCONSISTENCIES

"Now, darling, stay out of the kitchen. You know Celeste has influenza, and you may get it if you keep running in there. The door opens right into her bedroom."

The well meaning mother was talking to her daughter, twelve years old, and a fine specimen of health.

Celeste, the maid, had contracted influenza of a mild form the day before. She had been put to bed in her miniature bedroom off the kitchen of the big fashionable apartment.

A nurse had been summoned. She cared for her patient, dined with the family, and did numerous little tasks that were not in the least connected with the care of Celeste. For the sake of tranquility she forebore to make comment when the well-meaning mother talked incessantly about germs.

"Gracious, darling, don't go near the kitchen," said the mother when "Darling," whose real name was Anna, suddenly decided in the afternoon that she wanted to make fudge.

"But what difference does it make when I talk to the nurse and sit beside her at the table and sometimes touch her? She takes care of Celeste and stays in her room and in the kitchen, too?" Anna protested with more than average wisdom.

"It's different with the nurse, but I don't want you to go near Celeste or the kitchen," the mother replied. She petter her toy dog with the air of a woman who is bowed down by the cares of the universe and glanced a little impatiently at her small daughter, whom she never kissed or caressed because she feared "germs."

The nurse, however, wore a gown over her uniform, which put on at once upon entering Celeste's room and removed before she went into the kitchen. She washed her hands carefully, took the greatest care to wrap in paper all the kerchiefs (made from old rags) which Celeste had used, before burning them. She knew that the real source of infection or contamination in influenza, or any similar disease, is in the secretions of the body—particularly in the throat and nasal discharges.

Conditions were very bad because Celeste's bedroom opened directly into the kitchen, where the food for the family was prepared.

The nurse strove, by keeping the sick girl's dishes separate and the milk and soup she required in a separate ice box, to avoid exposing the rest of the family to Celeste's "germs," as her mistress persisted in calling them.

But it was all very inconsistent. The well-meaning mistress of its house would go into Celeste's room, lean against the bed, talk to her and, scorning all precautions against infection, would wander back to her boudoir and insist that "there was no danger." "She had had influenza!"

It was a little baffling from the small girl's standpoint. Instead of receiving intelligent instructions in hygiene, she was being threatened with "germs." Which is entirely wrong and most unfair to a child.

WE WOMEN

By BETTY BRAINERD

A DELICATE SUBJECT

I trust I will not break any bric-a-brac.

I am about to deal with a most delicate subject.

A bill has been introduced in the State Senate of New York which will merely require of women voters that they say they are over 21 instead of their exact ages, or saying they are more than 30, as the present law requires.

This law, oddly enough, was passed in the interests of women more than thirty so they would be spared the necessity of dealing with the horrid truth. The law was also framed on the premises that women under thirty would have no objection to giving their exact ages.

I have, of course, no desire to break any bric-a-brac, but special political significance is attached to the fact that the women of New York who are over thirty were required to admit as much if they wished to vote at the last election. A member of the senate says that the successful candidate for governor would have received almost one hundred thousand votes more if the law had considered the sensitiveness of some women on the subject of their ages.

This seems to be a serious indictment. Are we as vain as the senator would make us appear? Or aren't we?

The author of the new bill says that the inference drawn from the present law is that those under 30 must tell their right ages. He then adds, "Girls don't mind that if they are in the twenties, but no girl likes to admit she's over thirty. I suspect a lot of my constituents are just past thirty and think they look twenty-one."

Men wonder why women regard age as so much bric-a-brac. It is, of course, a prerogative of our sex which only the offensively curious trifle with. But beyond this "each age," as a poet once said, "is a dream that is dying."

Certainly we have the right to preserve our dreams. Why, then, do men intrude upon such a delicate subject?

Aren't we entitled to one or two special privileges?

Artificial Lumber Gives Promise of Structural Utility

[By Associated Press]

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Experiments in the making of "artificial" lumber are arousing increasing interest among government officials and leaders in the lumber industry.

Although none of the product has been marketed, officials of the National Lumber Manufacturers association declare that tests already made of a synthetic composition produced by Minnesota lumber interests show it possesses many qualities making it available for structural purposes.

The experiments are based on somewhat the same principle as that employed in the manufacture of paper from wood pulp. In the process not only the trunks and branches of young trees, but the leaves and smaller parts as well are ground up and mixed with other substances, virtually eliminating waste. The resulting compound is capable of being moulded into sizes and shapes of almost any description needed in building.

NAVY TO AID IN BAY CITY CONVENTION

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4.—The navy department has approved a schedule providing for the anticipation of battleships and destroyers of the United States navy in the naval show to be held in connection with the American Legion's national convention at San Francisco, October 15-20, according to a recent letter received by Morgan Keaton, California state adjutant, from Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt, Jr.

Included in the fleet will be nine battleships, thirty-eight destroyers and a number of armored cruisers, destroyer tenders, hospital ships and other auxiliary craft. The list of battleships comprises the California, Maryland, New York, Texas, Arizona, Pennsylvania, New Mexico, Idaho and Tennessee.

Destroyers ordered to San Francisco are the Delphy, Chauncey, Fuller, Percival, John Francis Burns, Farragut, Somers, Stoddert, Reno, Farquahar, Thompson, Kennedy, Paul Hamilton, William Jones, Woodbury, S. P. Lee, Nicholas, Young, Zeilin, McDermut, Yarborough, Lavallette, Sloat, Wood, Shirk, Kidder, Selfridge, Marcus, Mervine, Chase, Robert Smith, Mullany, Hull, MacDonough, Farrenholt, Sumner, Corry and Melvin.

Personnel attached to the vessels will number 900 commissioned officers, 100 warrant officers, and 16,000 enlisted men, Secretary Roosevelt's letter stated.

Legion convention officials are endeavoring to emphasize the naval program of the gathering to a greater extent than has been attempter in previous years according to Mr. Bolles. To that end, he said naval authorities of a number of countries allied with the United States in the World war have been asked to send vessels.

HEALTH HABITS IS REAL FACTOR

Recognition of the subject of health habits as a necessary factor in the curriculum of an educational institution has been given by the Ridgefield school, at Ridgefield, Connecticut, an exclusive preparatory school for boys.

The importance attached to this study by Theodore Carrington Jessup, the headmaster at Ridgefield, is reflected in the announcement that it would be included in the course of instruction.

"Instruction in health habits has been arranged for through the courtesy of the American Child Health association, of which Herbert Hoover is president," he says. Special attention is paid to the health and progressive development of the boys.

"Each boy is required to be weighed monthly, and failure to gain normally is noticed and corrective steps taken. Our records for the first term of this year show that in the upper school the average gain in weight was 2.3 pounds. In the lower school, the average gain for three months was 5.8 pounds.

"More attention is now being given to physical and psychological examinations of boys and girls for the purpose of determining for what career, what vocation, what surrounding their particular characteristics best fit them. Some 20 per cent of students who enter college do not graduate. Such facts have an economic significance relating to success, productiveness and happiness whether in college, industry or commercial life."

The Ridgefield school obviously purposes to adopt the system of child health education originated by the Child Health organization of America, the organization with which the American Child Hygiene association combined to become the new Child Health association.

This system is not involved. To the contrary, it is more easily understood by boys of preparatory school age than were the old methods of reading scientific text books and listening to technical lectures which had an element of mystery about them. The association has devised methods of presenting health lessons in entertaining fashion, through plays or games. The response of children to this sort of teaching is almost immediate.

From its administrative headquarters at 370 Seventh avenue, New York City, the association is in constant correspondence with schools throughout the country, providing them with sound, up-to-the-minute information on child health and providing methods of conveying it to young America.

THE PRESIDENT'S SANE ADDRESS

For the benefit of those who may not go all the way through the long addresses of presidents on tour, it may be wise to present again the substance of President Harding's address on the enforcement of the prohibition law.

Since one at least of the states, and the greatest in point of population and wealth, has repealed the state law to enforce the Volstead act, there has been much sometimes loose discussion as to the sovereignty of states and the part they should play in the enforcment of a national law.

The President points out very clearly that this is not a vindication of state sovereignty, but an abolication of it, since the state resigns its law enforcing function and practically asks the federal government to enter for the enforcement of the law.

We think the following summary of the high lights in the President's address is worth the careful reading of every citizen who has the interest of his country at heart. It is a bigger question after all than whether Jones or Smith shall drink or shall not drink. It is a question whether we shall enforce a law legally enacted and standing upon the state books of the land. These are the high points in the President's address to which we refer:

"We all recognize that to secure effective administration of the laws to establish in the public mind an attitude of willing acceptance and obedience to law, is the most impressive mark of a civilized community. . . . Civilization had to travel a long way before it came to be commonly accepted that even an unwise law ought to be enforced in orderly fashion, because such enforcement would insure its repeal or modification, also in orderly fashion, if that were found desirable. . . . The very basis of our political establishment is the idea of a dual sovereignty, of the states and the nation; the idea of concurrent authority and concurrent responsibility. That is so elemental in our system that to do away with it would amount to demolishing our whole scheme of government.

"If the burden of enforcement shall continue to be increasingly thrown upon the federal government, it will be necessary, at large expense, to create a federal police authority which in time will inevitably come to be regarded as an intrusion upon and interference with the right of local authority to manage local concerns. The possibilities of disaster in such a situation hardly need to be suggested.

"It is a curious illustration of loose thinking, that some people have proposed, as a means to protection the fullest rights of the states, that the states should abandon their part in enforcing the prohibitory policy. That means simply an invitation to the federal government to exercise powers which should be exercised by the states. Instead of being an assertion of state rights, it is an abandonment of them; it is an abdication; it amounts to a confession by the state that it doesn't choose to govern itself but prefers to turn the task, or a considerable part of it, over to the federal authority. There could be no more complete negation of state rights. . . . When a state deliberately refuses to exercise the powers which the constitution expressly confers on it, it obviously commits itself to a policy of nullifying state authority, the end of which we are reluctant to conjecture. . . . The spectacle of a state nullifying its own authority, and asking the national sovereigity to take over an important part of its powers, is new. When the implications of this strange proposal are fully understood by people and parties devoted to preserving the rights of the states, the new nullifications, I venture to say, will discover that they have perpetuated what is likely to prove one of the historic blunders in political management. With all good intention the majority sentiment of the United States has sought by law to remove strong drink as a cure upon the American citizen, but ours is a larger problem now to remove lawless drinking as a menace to the republic itself."

GOOD WORK, GOVERNOR

We extend the fullest measure of our approval to Governor Richardson for his official action in the case of two murderers condemned to death, and for whom clemency was asked.

One of the cases was that of the young man in the Imperial valley, who, with a companion, after being given a lift by a traveler in a motor car, turned upon his benefactor and helped shoot and beat him to death.

The second of the precious duo escaped the death penalty solely because of his youth.

In the last case to come to the governor's attention, the murderer chased his victim along the street, shooting him four or five times, and then beating him brutally. The victim of the attack died within two days after suffering great agony.

Just why the governor should have been asked to extend clemency to either of these wretches is not exactly clear to the thinking mind. And apparently it was not clear to the governor, either, for he clearly, definitely and promptly refused to interfere with the executions.

No matter how new a clock may be it is sure to show the marks of time.

Every man thinks that he helps others a lot more than they help him.

Self is lost to the individual who assumes the airs of others.

There are more brain calms than brain storms.

MORE BENEVOLENCE

A woman was executed in Russia not many days ago, the daughter of a former commander-in-chief of the Russian army. Her crime was the concealment of some sacred vessels, how serious a crime may be determined from the fact that she was sentenced to death by the brotherly and benevolent soviet government.

She was offered clemency if she would ask for it, and her father, unwillingly enough perhaps, had been of service to brothers Trotsky and Lenine in technical military assistance. But she declared that she wanted no clemency from the torturers of Russia, and went to the firing squad, perhaps for this affront to the leaders of Russian friendliness and benevolence.

It all proves that there is some good blood left yet in Russia, and that Lenine and Trotsky are shedding it as rapidly as they can and upon the smallest pretense.

The Medics and the Morons

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

The American Medical society at San Francisco has been threshing the dust out of a few moth eaten idols, and when the dust subsided a few regulars were on the table with megaphones talking in the language of progress.

Estelle Lawton Lindsey

One voice that sent the echoes reverberating through the main streets of the country was that of Dr. Henry G. Brainerd of Los Angeles. The burden of his speech was the right of every child of earth to be well born, which means two things, to have a heritage of health, mental and physical, and a pair of parents with grit and intelligence enough to provide for him until he is grown and educated.

Margaret Sanger said something like this in New York some years ago and because she had the courage of her convictions and told women practical methods of producing well born children, she went to jail. The idea of intentional parenthood shocked the New Yorkers into several different varieties of spasms.

Margaret Sanger wanted the laws which forbid dignified scientific information in regard to birth control wiped from the statute books. She wanted morons, criminals, idiots, the insane and the degenerate controlled and forbidden to reproduce their kind. And the Anthony Comstocks and their followers went up in righteous smoke.

Now those are just the things which Dr. Brainerd advocated in San Francisco before the medical convention; those are the things which he courageously asked the doctors of the United States to help bring about.

Let all intelligent people honor Dr. Brainerd for that speech and see that nobody sends him to jail for damaging the "morals" of the community, as Margaret Sanger was sent.

Dr. Brainerd spoke out in no uncertain terms and gave excellent reasons for what he asked. Declaring in the light of the examinations conducted by the draft boards during the war that there are today in this country 656,000 men and women between the ages of 20 and 45 known to be utterly unfit to be parents, he showed that these appalling figures are probably far short of the actual number of such social menaces.

Such as these he would have restrained by law from parenthood. The cutting off of this flood of the unfit at the source would clear them for the capable and intelligent, the healthy and gifted to have many more children than are now born to them. Under the new conditions a large family would be a mark of intelligence whereas it is now too often the mark of stupidity and lack of self control.

"What the world needs now," said Dr. Brainerd, "is not a greater but a better population."

And then he asked what women have long been asking, he invited the physicians of this country to get back of a movement to wipe off of the statute books the present law against birth control and so open the way for scientific information about natural laws to be placed in the hands of parents.

He asked for laws providing for the sterilization or segregation of the unfit and for colonies in which they could be confined, and he asked for uniform and better marriage laws with a prerequisite of marriage a health certificate.

Will the doctors back him? Perhaps not at first but soon. They will have to, for protest against the degeneration of the race due to the sentimental license accorded the unfit members of society is rising betimes and murmurs are heard everywhere against the burden imposed on the taxpayers for the maintenance of its army of paupers and morons.

Prejudice can't hold out much longer against the welfare of the social body. Meantime, women can do much to aid Dr. Brainerd's program.

If in the light of the available scientific information people still adhere to the archaic laws which class knowledge of birth control as obscene, those who refuse to change the laws should be made to pay all the taxes needed for support of the unfit. Surely it is not asking much of a man to ask him to endure the cost of his convictions.

Vocabulary

He paid the penalty for his temerity. In other words he paid the penalty for his venturesome boldness; his excessive disregard of danger; his rashness.

A disquisition is a treatise based on systematic investigation or discourse on any subject, considered as the result of such investigation; a formal presentation of the steps and results of an inquiry; investigation; search. Also, disquisition means examination; inquiry; investigation; search.

Something would foment class hatred and strife. That is to say, it would stir up to heat or violence; instigate or incite; abet.

Note the use of the three foregoing words in the following sentence:

..He had the temerity to prepare a disquisition that was sure to foment class hatred.

THE LISTENING POST

By James W. Foley

JAMES W. FOLEY

Along about the Fourth of July it is well to reflect upon many things.

Political freedom, for instance.

Personal freedom.

Freedom to come and go, to do or not to do, to select, to elect.

To do a day's work or go fishing.

* * *

It was not always so.

Freedom, so far as the human race is concerned, is a comparatively recent thing.

Slavery existed for many centuries up to fifty or sixty years ago.

Ancient peoples enslaved the losers in war.

* * *

The right to take a part in political struggles was accorded only to a part of the people.

Millions labored while others made laws for them.

They were ruled or controlled, their status fixed and their place in life determined with no voice of their own.

* * *

They knew nothing of the ballot.

There was no such thing as a trial by jury.

They were born, labored, struggled, suffered, were tried, condemned and executed.

And not at any time did they have a voice.

* * *

They selected no officers to administer their affairs.

They voted for no laws and against no laws.

They were the dumb, driven cattle, of which the poet speaks.

* * *

It was not until a comparatively short time ago that the inherent rights of human beings were recognized.

Political rights they had none.

Human rights what they could gain for themselves by force.

Constitutional rights, as we know them, none.

Because constitutions were unknown.

* * *

All these are reflections appropriate to this Fourth of July business.

Because the first Fourth of July made some declarations that changed the political order of the world.

In effect, the first Fourth of July declared that you were a free agent.

So long as you obeyed the laws.

* * *

And you were given a voice in the making of laws.

The first Fourth of July said you could sleep till 9 o'clock in the morning if you wished.

You could vote for Jones or Brown.

You could live in a one or two story house, or whatever kind of house you could build, rent or pay for.

* * *

You could educate your child to be what you chose, so long as you gave your child the opportunity for education.

You could choose your friends as you wished.

You could travel within this country by land or water when and where you chose.

So long as you could pay your fare.

* * *

No one could take away your liberty except a jury of your countrymen.

After a trial and judgment.

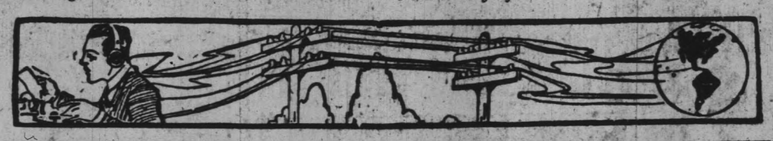
Your property could not be alienated except by due process of law.

In other words, the first Fourth of July made you a free man among free men in a free country.

* * *

How grateful are you?

That is a pertinent question to ask at this Fourth of July.



Songs of the Poets

To Minerva—By Thomas Hood

My temples throb, my pulses boil,
I'm sick of Song, and Ode and Ballad—
So, Thyrsis, take the Midnight Oil,
And pour it on the lobster salad.

My brain is dull, my sight is foul,
I cannot write a verse, or read,—
Then, Pallas, take away thine Owl,
And let us have a lark instead.

WHY I LOVE MY COUNTRY

By DR. FRANK CRANE

I LOVE my country because it is mine.

This statement is made without any egotism. It does not mean that I think my country is the greatest country in the world and that the people in it are superior to people anywhere else.

It simply means that they are my people. They are bone of my bone and blood of my blood. Their heritage is mine, their prosperity or disaster is mine, and their future is mine. They constitute the larger Me.

Sometimes I am very proud of my country and sometimes I am very much ashamed of her. But in either case it is my country.

In other words it is a natural tie, it is a development of a natural instinct, and when it is strong I am more of a normal man and when it is weak I am less.

I love my country in the same way I love my wife and my family. When I say I love my wife, it does not imply that I think she is stronger, more beautiful, more virtuous and more intelligent than any other woman in the world, but it simply means that whatever she may be, it is my privilege, duty and pleasure to stand by her and share in her good or bad fortune, for better or worse, for richer or for poorer, in sickness or in health, till death do us part.

To the right kind of a mind this is not an irritating bondage, but is a wholesome source of strength and joy.

No other country can ever be the same to me as mine. I like other countries, I enjoy visiting them and meeting their people, and I wish them all well. But the idea of considering any one of them as standing in the same relation to me as my own country impresses me as a sort of spiritual infidelity.

If called upon I should be glad to die for my country, and I want to be willing to do that which is much more difficult—to live for my country, and to make it as near as may be the best of all countries.

In other words when I find my country acting in a way I think is wrong, it is my duty to protest loudly, and when she acts as I think is right, I am not ashamed of the glow of pride which it gives me.

But right or wrong, she is my country. My life belongs to herself.

There is one thing only to which I acknowledge a higher loyalty than to my country, and that is humanity. My first duty is to human kind. My second duty is to do all in my power to induce my country to assume its responsibilities and discharge its duty to humanity.

As my country does not exist for me, but I exist for my country, so also the world does not exist for my country, but my country exists for the world.

I shall take part in no plan that implies the extinguishment of my country for the benefit of others, and no plan that shall imply the extinguishment of any other country for the benefit of mine, or that implies the advantage and prosperity of my country at the expense of the rest of the world.

This I conceive to be an intelligent view of patriotism.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

THE VOLSTEAD VIGILANTES

[Memphis Commercial Appeal]

In New Orleans there has been organized the Volstead Vigilantes. The Vigilantes are not setting themselves up as the law, but as sympathizers with the law. When they have reasonable grounds for belief that the law is being violated, their suspicions are communicated to the prohibition enforcement officers, who conduct investigations and make arrests if justified by the evidence. The guilt or innocence of the suspects will be determined by the Federal court. And Federal courts have the reputation of grinding so fine that the guilty always tremble when arraigned.

New Orleans is a favored port of the rum-runner. It isn't a far sweep across the gulf from Cuba, the source of much of the contraband liquor that finds it way into the United States. Scattered about to the northeast of Cuba are the Bahama Islands.

Thus it is that New Orleans has become a liquor-distributing point for supplying in part not only border states, but all the states of the Mississippi valley and even the great city of Chicago on the shore of Lake Michigan.

If the Volstead Vigilantes succeed in killing the whisky traffic in New Orleans, and the fact becomes generally known, there will be less liquor of any kind sold in the states bordering on the Mississippi river.

For that reason law-abiding people throughout the south will watch with interest the work of this new organization.

MORE WORK FOR THE REVISERS

[From the San Francisco Chronicle]

An historical movie is one in which you see a sword-equipped knight in knee pants smoking a cork-tip cigarette.

A PROHIBITION EPIC

[Brooklyn Eagle]

The much press-agented Commissioner Haynes, who is our supreme so-called Prohibition enforcer, has written a book on Volstead vanities, designed for light summer reading. Mr. Haynes draws down $5000 a year for his official endeavors. He is peddling his literary efforts to various newspapers for $1500 each, serial rights included. The commissioner, not content with fame, is going to make a good thing out of his job on the side.

There is ample precedent for this in the present state of our public morals. Woodrow Wilson allowed his secret state papers to be published for a price, and Mr. Lloyd George is now engaged in a similar enterprise. Dozens of smaller fry have cleaned up on their official knowledge. But Commissioner Haynes is the first man, so far as we are aware, who has dared to sell government information while still in office.

We hope that Commissioner Haynes will tell us how he kept Washington dry during Shrine Week. He can knock a good deep-sea tale out of his off-shore rum fleet. Then there is that thrilling engagement at Greenport, L. I., in which fifty whisky desperadoes were besieged in an isolated house by a force of deputy sheriffs who were handily put to flight, the enemy making off with $90,000 of illicit liquor.

NOT IF SMITH KNOWS IT

Exposition Traces Rise of Science

Many of the mightiest strides of science through the ages are vividly illustrated in the Tercentennial Jubilee Exposition in Gothenburg, Sweden, which is now open and will continue through the summer. Recent inventions are sharply contrasted with objects serving similar purposes in times even as long ago as the stone age, and in some departments it is possible for the visitor to trace out a complete chain of development in scientific achievement.

Archaeology has proved that the region where Gothenburg now stands was inhabited at least 5000 years ago, by the ancestors of the present Swedes. One of the most interesting exhibits at the exposition is a well-preserved skeleton of a man who lived in the Stone Age, 5000 years ago, and who had evidently met his death on what was then the western sea shore of Sweden. With his skeleton was found a two-edged axe. This crude weapon, which was also a tool, contrasts strangely with the exhibits of modern cutlery, surgical instruments, and delicate tools which have become possible through the unusual refinement of Swedish stel.

From the Stone Age also comes an actual boat which was discovered near Gothenburg. Though made of wood, this boat has, curiously enough, been fairly well preserved through fifty centuries. One can see that it was constructed by burning out the inside of a log, which was afterwards trimmed with a flint axe. This rare relic, certainly one of the oldest marine objects in the world, is item No. 1 in the navigation exhibition of the fair, which, according to experts, is the most complete of its kind ever prepared. Four hundred ship models alone are on display, and every phase of navigation is illustrated, whether the propelling power is furnished by oars, sail, steam or oil. Not far away is an actual Swedish marine motor of the Diesel type said to be the largest in the world. This is a four cycle, six cylinder motor, developing 2000 horsepower. It is designed for a new Swedish motorship of 10,000 tons.

Up-to-date navigation under steam is represented by the well-known Swedish invention, the de Laval geared turbine engine, and by the Stal turbine engine. Another Swedish invention that has been attracting much attention at the fair is the "vapor accumulator," which is used in many steam power plants in Europe and America. The company which manufactures "accumulators" is now planning to install them on steamships which make short regular trips. Thus a ship may be run by steam, and yet have no firing done on board.

One of the most striking examples of mechanical achievement through a long succession of inventions is illustrated in the Gothenburg exhibition of lighthouses and buoys. In the days of the Vikings night beacons consisted principally of wood fires built on hilltops or conspicuous rocks at times when ships were expected to return. Then came the coal fire beacon, of which the earliest known in Sweden was built in 1202. The coal as burned in an iron basket hosited high by means of a long lever. But Sweden had no continuously tended lighthouse until 1635. Then came a long period of steady improvement which in 1904 culminated with the first use of the automatic gas light buoy, invented by the blind Swedish inventor, Gustaf Dalen, called "the Edison of Sweden." These buoys, which guide ships into New York harbor, and into many other important harbors of the world, can operate absolutely without attention as much as a year at a time, and have an uncanny way of lighting up automatically whenever the sky gets dark, whether the darkness is due to a storm, an eclipse, or night fall. The secret lies in the Dalen sun valve which is extremely sensitive to light.

One of the most prized exhibits at the exposition is an actual "hot air engine," which was invented and built by John Ericsson, whose fame does not rest solely on the "U. S. S. Monitor" and the screw propeller. This is one of the features in the "Swedes in Other Lands Exhibition."

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

THE WEEPER

"Pussy" was the youngest of five children. She was a scrawny child, much given to weeping. The others were healthy, hearty creatures who talked at the top of their lungs, slammed doors, muddied the halls and littered the furniture with their "things," ran errands for the neighbors and waited cheerfully on their mother.

But "Pussy the Weeper" was father's pet. She shadowed him. She sat beside father at table, in church, in the car. When one of the others claimed the privilege Pussy wept and father said, "Never mind. She's the youngest. Don't make your sister cry."

This didn't make the others as happy in their minds regarding Pussy as one might wish. Richard crinkled his face in exact imitation of hers preparing for a weep, pointed a provoking finger at his eye and the rest laughed. Pussy wept and ran crying to her father. "Dick's making fun of me."

"Dick. Come into the house. You ought to be ashamed of yourself making a little girl cry. Your own sister, too. Shame on you."

"Pussy," said mother, "please eat a little of your potato. The doctor said you must not eat so much meat. Eat your vegetables with——"

But Pussy was off her chair and on father's lap and he was stroking her hair and saying, "Never mind the doctor. Just eat what you like. There, there!"

"Pussy, stand on both your feet. The first thing you know you'll have that foot all out of shape. Stand straight."

"Oo-oo-oo," wept Pussy. "I'm going to tell father that you're all the time scolding me. Oo-oo-oo."

"Lily-Mary," (that was her real name) said the teacher, "Put both your feet on the floor and hold your book as I told you. I can't allow you to grow lop-sided."

"Oo-oo-wow," wept Pussy. "I'm going to tell my father on you."

"Indeed," said the teacher grimly. "There's nothing like having something to tell while you're about it! In the meantime you'd better learn that we have no time for howlers here. The study room is empty. You can have it all to yourself and cry as loud and as long as you wish. Out you go!"

Pussy sat in the quiet room and wept a few weeps and then busied herself with the reader she had carried to exile. Soon the teacher called her and said: "Have you finished weeping? Are you ready to work with this class?"

"Yes," said Pussy.

Now the weeper went only for father. The teacher had no trouble with her and the brothers and sisters were free from her tyranny until father came home. "That's something," they said.

The best cure for a weeper, one who weeps to an audience, is to deprive him of the audience. Give him no sympathy. Withhold the thing he cries for. Hand him a handkerchief.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

You know how women handle money. They count it in front of open windows. Then they shove a wad of bills into a handbag which only half closes and begin to talk about the week's bill at the Palais de Movey. Which is just what the school ma'am did yesterday.

"That's a lot of money you have there," I said, as I got into the 'bus along with her.

"I'm going to make an investment," she said, happily. "I'm going to be a business woman after this."

That frightened me. Her salary barely enables her to keep one small gray mouse on the crumbs that fall from her table. The city treasurer hasn't the nerve to face her. So he sends her check by mail. A woman who doesn't handle an unmortgaged dollar from one year's end to another knows nothing about business and investments.

"Whatcha goin' to buy?" I asked.

"The most wonderful oil stock——"

So we went back to her place and read some literature. Some miserable, scaly, contemptible son of a pawn-broker was bombarding school teachers with literature. He made the most astonishing promises. Twenty, thirty, forty per cent a month. Three hundred per cent turnover in six months. A year's savings translated into a life's savings, just by trusting him.

"This man is a liar and a thief," I said. "If he could do what he promises young John D. 'd furnish him the money he needs."

I had the hardest kind of a time persuading that poor, mislead woman not to throw her puny little savings into the ditch. Her mind told her that my arguments were sound. But she is so desperately poor—and she so needs the money.

"I may send that swindler the money even yet," she said. "You know—he might be honest."

What's the use?

On This July Fourth

Nearly 150 years have passed since that memorable July day when America took her place among nations as an independent member of that great sisterhood. A long struggle followed the momentous decision of those early patriots before their dreams were realized and their aims accomplished, but they builded well, and on the firm foundation they laid our great country has risen to a place among the highest.

After the war of independence, the Constitution, that remarkable document that really bound the straggling, bickering colonies into a union of states. And with the Constitution, a form of government that has proved the most successful experiment in democracy yet devised by man—a form of government, in fact, that will probably endure, in essence, for as long a time ahead as our thought can reach.

With the completion of 147 years of independence, our nation, which we are prone to consider one of the world's newcomers, has a distinction that we are less likely to realize. Our government has endured in its present form longer than any great power in Europe except Great Britain and Spain. France has seen many violent political changes since our nation came into existence—the Revolution, the Empire, the restoration, and the scarcely less violent upheavals of more recent years, culminating in the rise of the Third Republic. Germany and Russia have undergone epochal alterations in their form of government. Italy became unified under the inspiration of Garibaldi and is now ruled by the Fascisti.

Of the smaller European nations, Switzerland's democracy has proved its worth and Holland and the Scandinavian countries have demonstrated a stability not found elsewhere in Europe. There is apparently among the people of northern Europe a political genius that the Latins and Slavs do not possess.

Numerous theories have been advanced for this somewhat peculiar condition, but it is not necessary to go into them. There is, however, common to all north European peoples the democratic experience of the folkmote, which in our own country became the town meeting. This developed initiative, grasp of public affairs, readiness to deal with the questions of government. The north Europeans developed the institutions of democracy to a higher degree than did the Greeks or Latins and the stability of their governments today is probably rather directly dependent on that very fact.

However, history is less important to us than today's events. It is better that we look forward to future accomplishments than that we live in the past accomplishments of our forefathers. It is better that we form a dynamic nation than that we remain static.

We find, when we take account of stock after 147 years of freedom and democratic rule, that we have a government which has proved stable, capable of surviving the severest possible shock—that of civil war—and for the most part admirably adapted to our needs. But all that need not blind us to that fact that it is not, and cannot in the nature of things, be perfect, and that it is far better for us to strive for perfection than to remain satisfied with anything less.

There has grown up in our country a movement, or perhaps a series of movements, which express as their aim the intention to "inculcate respect for the Constitution." Respect for the Constitution is probably innate in every true American. In so far as such movements serve to enlighten our people as to the benefits of the government under which we live, they are worthy of the highest commendation. In so far as they serve to create a new interest in our public affairs, they are praiseworthy indeed.

But in so far as their intention is to substitute a blind submissiveness, an idolatry of the Constitution, an attitude of mind that would hold America static, they are most pernicious. For then they merely introduce into America a modified form of Chinese ancestor worship. They would dissuade us from any critical examination of our institutions or suggested changes therein, just as the Chinese hold that what was good enough for their grandfathers is far too good for them.

It is probably true that the Constitution as it stands is more thoroughly acceptable to conservatives in our body politic than to liberals, and conservatives are not only entitled to their point of view, but they are quite as essential in society as any other group. But it must be remembered that our Constitution includes not only the framework of our government, but a Bill of Rights—and some of those who are most vociferous about the Constitution seem to have little regard for the Bill of Rights.

It would do no harm for such persons to recall this historic fact: The Constitution was not accepted by the states, and would not have been accepted, without the introduction of the Bill of Rights in the first ten amendments. It will also do no harm, on July 4, early in the morning, to take down a copy of the Constitution and read over that Bill of Rights, for it forms the cornerstone of our liberties.

It interprets the spirit of the Constitution and of the Founders of our Republic who drew that immortal instrument; without them the framework of a government means little. It is quite possible, theoretically at least, that a republican form of government might be as tyrannical as a monarchy, if the rights of minorities were disregarded. In last month's issue of Public Affairs, Lieutenant Colonel Theodore Roosevelt gave an admirable definition of Americanism, and the points he stressed were these—that Americanism means liberty of speech, liberty of assemblage, liberty of the press, religious freedom, and toleration of minorities so far as their acts are lawful.

So here we stand today—the most prosperous nation on the face of the earth, the most favored by nature, the most hopeful for the future. We have tremendous natural resources, we have a government that has worked out splendidly and that still serves us well. What now do we need?

First, we need to preserve what we have; second, we need to work, each and every one of us, to improve and perfect our heritage, to add to the physical and spiritual richness of our nation, to guard it against despoilers within and without.

Let us see what we have done with our natural resources. James Oliver Curwood writes in a recent number of American Forestry that barely 15 years ago northwestern Canada teemed with wild life; today wild ducks, sheep, bison, are practically extinct. We know how our bison were slaughtered; but today we are slaughtering our forests, our oil resources, vastly more important to us, than our wild life. Floods ravage our denuded countrysides where the forest cover has gone. We are ravaging nature's bounty, not utilizing it in such a way as to serve all our people for all time. Our people have been indifferent, and unless they awake to their need they must sooner or later pay the penalty.

Just as we have been indifferent to the fate of our natural resources we have been indifferent to the fate of our governmental institutions. Half America's voters do not go to the polls on election day, and the result is that we are likely to get government by minorities. But what is vastly worse is the fact that we do not go to the polls on primary days, or join our political clubs, or take any real interest in our local and national affairs. We have—too many of us—abdicated our power, sometimes into unscrupulous hands, more often into the hands of well-meaning men who do not know our wishes and who themselves have too little real understanding of our problems.

Lincoln, at Gettysburg, pleaded with the nation to dedicate itself to the great task that lay before it. His plea was heard, and popular government was saved. America will respond where the stress is great, where the need is clearly understood. But can America only exert its utmost effort in war? Cannot peace call out as high a patriotism as the martial trumpets?

Let us on this Independence Day, 1923, dedicate ourselves to the great, ennobling task before us—to make this nation the democracy our forefathers visioned, to bring our institutions to the perfection we seek for them, to look fearlessly and resolutely into the future, as our fathers did when they framed the Republic.

This is 1923, and their work was done almost 150 years ago. Since then we have seen the rise of a new industrial system, enormous development of scientific knowledge, the crash of medieval empires, the downfall of monarchy.

Let us keep the machinery of our government as up to date as we would keep the machinery of our rolling mills or foundries! To do that, we must develop in the fields of economics, politics, sociology, as we develop in chemistry and engineering; but that is not all.

To keep any machinery in good working order, we must give it careful attention; and that applies as much to the machinery of government as to any other. The rights of the people gain a new vitality when awakened understanding, personal and active participation in governmental affairs, and full and general discussion of governmental policies hold the place to which they are entitled. Then we have truly a government of the people, by the people and for the people.

He has been identified with boxing for twenty-five years as referee, promoter and manager. YARBROUGH HATS IN NEW QUARTERS

The Yarbrough Hat shop, which has been a business institution of Glendale for the past seven years, at 108 West Broadway, experienced moving day Tuesday, and is now located one door nearer Brand boulevard, at 106 West Broadway.

In announcing the event, Mrs. Yarbrough is advertising a lot of untrimmed hats and a variety of flowers at special prices, to be sold all next week until the stock is entirely disposed of. This sale will make room for the new fall models soon to be shown.

Enterprise Has Large Warehouse

"Few customers realize, upon coming into our store, that we carry as large a stock as we do," said Mr. Shilling of the Enterprise Furniture company at 216 East Broadway.

"The fact of the matter is that we sell more from our warehouse and store rooms in the rear, than we do from the store. A great store of reserve stock is kept in our warehouses to serve both our Broadway and South Brand stores."

A large line of grass furniture, imported from China, is an attractive part of the stock offered at the Enterprise. These are substantially constructed of grass and reed.

CALLS SCIENCE ADVANCED LINE

OAKLAND, July 4.—Science is not knowledge of a distinct kind, but of a distinctly higher grade than ordinary knowledge, Dr. William F. Ritter, president of Science Service, Washington, D. Common knowledge about anything, Dr. Ritter said, may be converted into scientific knowledge of the subject by refining and extending it to the fullest, most accurate and most unbiased knowledge of the subject.

STOP PLAY AND WORK IS URGED

In the United States today, he said, there are 14,000,000 foreign-born and 2,500,000 adult native born who are unable to read or write.

I.C.E. IN SESSION AT DES MOINES

REFORMS IN CHURCH SINGING

DES MOINES, Ia., July 4.—United Press) Some church refrains may find themselves persona non grata, if Prof. H. Augustine Smith of Boston university succeeds in his crusade at the international Christian Endeavor convention, beginning here today.

Announcing that he will inaugurate a fight against jazz and slang, Prof. Smith added:

"Some church music is worse than jazz.

"The child who sings 'I Want to Be an Angel' needs a doctor."

DES MOINES, Ia., July 4 (United Press).—With 15,000 visitors expected and provision made for housing 30,000 if the need should arise, Des Moines today saw the opening of one of the greatest religious events of the year—the 29th international Christian Endeavor convention, which will last through July 9.

Law enforcement, world peace, religious education and evangelistic subjects are scheduled to be discussed by a group of such famous public men as William Jennings Bryan, William G. McAdoo, James J. Davis, secretary of labor, Sherwood Eddy, Gipsy Smith, President Francis E. Clark of the Christian Endeavor international organization and Sir Lionel Fletcher, special missionary of the New Life campaign.

The program will culminate with a gigantic mass meeting at the state fair grounds Sunday afternoon, July 8, when Bryan is expected to address more than 50,000 Endeavorers and visitors.

Secretary Davis will speak on "Christian Endeavor and the Home" Thursday afternoon, July 5. President Clark and Sir Lionel Fletcher are scheduled to give their addresses Thursday night. McAdoo and Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon league, will speak Friday afternoon, Wheeler talking on "Christian Endeavor and Law Enforcement" and the former secretary of the treasury discussing "Christian Endeavor and American Citizenship."

Dr. Ira Landrith and Dr. John Timothy Stone, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church of Chicago, are the speakers for Friday night. Saturday afternoon Rev. Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War, will speak on "Christian Endeavor and World Peace." Hugh S. Magill, general secretary of the International Sunday School Council of Religious Education, also will give an address.

Accompanied by bands and guards, state delegations in costume and representatives of foreign countries, in native dress, will march in a spectacular parade Saturday night.

One of the features of the convention will be a Temple of Fine Arts, housed in a leading downtown church. It will be in charge of Prof. H. Augustine Smith of Boston university, who will have on display during the sessions 500 famous prints.

Guides will conduct visitors through the art galleries. Prof. Smith has been in Des Moines to direct rehearsals for a pageant of 500 participants and a chorus of 500 which will take part in the fine arts program.

At the opening session today representatives from the Kentucky state reformatory society of Christian Endeavor will present President Clark, the founder of the organization, with a convention gavel.

Simultaneous state and sectional conventions and rallies will precede the closing session on Monday night.

Fifteen platforms have been built in the downtown streets to accommodate the huge street meetings which will be features of the convention program.

FOR SAFETY FIRST

WASHINGTON (United Press).—The highway education board of the National Automobile chambe: of commerce, located here, is offering prizes for essays to school teachers and pupils on how to promote safety on the highways. The awards offered total $6,500, including trips to Washington for the national winners.

THE NUISANCE

Little fly
You are sly,
With your quick and shifty eye;
And you're part of the Creation
But I'm blest if I know why.
With your toes
On my nose,
And your stinger through my hose,
And I never seem to hit you
Though I pelt myself with blows.

Now you land
On my hand
And you crawl to beat the band,
You are fickle and you tickle
Quite as much as I can stand.
You are there
Where my hair
Is so thin I cannot spare
Any more and when I swat you
You go sailing off in air.

Little fly
When I lie
Down to close my weary eye
And to doze perhaps a little
You come buzzing, buzzing by,
And you keep
Me from sleep
That might otherwise be deep,
For I wave my hands about me
With a vicious, useless sweep.

Oh, I pray
What I may
Be in all this world today,
Be it good or be it bad,
Whether long or short my stay,
Break me flat,
Bid me scat,
Send me reeling to the mat,
But don't let me be a nuisance,
Anything, oh Lord, but that!

SKELETON OF PREHISTORIC MONSTER FOUND IN CHINA

[By Associated Press]

PEKING, July 4.—Practically a complete fossilized skeleton of a dinosaur has been discovered by members of the third Asiatic expedition sent out by the American Museum of Natural History under the leadership of Roy Chapman Andrews.

The expedition left Peking early in April for a point near Ehrlin, 270 miles beyond Kalgan, on the Urga route, where last year's excavations gave promise of further valuable finds.

Working in what appears to have been a bend in a river-bed, the searchers found the skeleton at a depth of three feet.

In spite of the presence of numerous bones of other animals it has been possible to distinguish those of the huge creature. The ribs on the upper side are nearly all in place and a fossilized tail about ten feet in length is entirely complete. The work of excavating and covering the bones with preservatives has been going on for two weeks.

NORMAL HEALTH AND ITS VALUE

Watch Your Weight for an Index to General Condition

Insurance companies publish statistics informing you that if you would consider yourself in normal health you should weigh so much and be so tall at a certain age. The value of these figures as a correct index on the subject, and some of the things underweight or underheighth may indicate, is given in a report from the city of Detroit, a copy of which was sent to the American Child Health association of which Herbert Hoover is president. The report is the result in height, weight and age observation of some of the school children of Detroit, and it attributes malnutrition as the cause in the cases of children who did not come up to standard.

As supporting arguments to the height-weight-age index as a good means of determining health and condition, the report says:

"Loss of weight or failure to gain is one of the suspicious signs of tuberculosis.

"The 15 per cent or more underweight group in contrast to other children includes twice as many markedly anemics, twice as many heart cases, more cases with enlarged cervical glands and among older children, more cases with suspicious lungs.

"A grouping of the underweight children in this intensive study shows 21 per cent to be sickly children, 17 percent to be in poor health, and, in addition, to possess handicapping physical defects, 25 percent to be of slight development with visible evidences of subnormal nutrition and with other physical defects, and 37 per cent to be of slight development with visible evidence of subaverage nutrition.

"The opinion of school medical inspectors is that the membership of the nutrition class as selected by the weight test represents a group visibly below par in health.

"The taking of weight and height impresses health upon the consciousness of child and parent. It is a tangible something which can be understood and appreciated by the family, and it is a valuable tool in the scheme of health education."

FORMER SULTAN DISLIKES HEAT OF EGYPT'S SUMMER

LONDON, July 4.—Mohammed VI, at one time Sultan of Turkey, wants to get away from Egypt, where he finds the summers too hot. The British will not permit him to live in Palestine or Cyprus, so he is considering Switzerland.

The present Turkish government is said to be willing to allow Mohammed's wives, who are now in Constantinople, to join him, but he does not want them to come to a European non-Moslem country, so in Switzerland he will be alone with the exception of his 12-year-old son, his physician and his personal attendants.

"Mary," said the mistress, "why didn't you wash that window?"

"Sure, and I did wash it on the inside, ma'am, so we could look out of it, but I thought I wouldn't clean the outside, so those curious children next door couldn't look in."
